

CALL FOR PAPERS

XXIII Banca d'Italia public finance workshop

Date: 4-5 September 2025

Location: Banca d'Italia headquarters, Roma, Italy

We are very pleased to announce the 23rd edition of the annual Banca d'Italia public finance workshop. As usual, it will bring together public finance researchers from academia, central banks and other policy institutions. The workshop will provide a forum for in-depth discussions on topical issues, particularly those related to advanced economies burdened by high public debts and rising spending needs, in a context of momentous geopolitical and technological shifts.

If interested, you can find the program of last year's workshop here.

Main Conference Themes

We encourage submissions on, but not limited to, the following topics:

- fiscal policy and innovation-led growth;
- public investment and public support to private investment;
- economics of defense;
- sustainability and reform of welfare systems;
- managing the fallout of the green and digital transitions on inequality

Submission Guidelines

Authors are encouraged to submit both empirical and theoretical research, with a microeconomic or a macroeconomic approach. If you are interested in presenting, please send a draft of the paper (or a long abstract) to PubFinWorkshop@bancaditalia.it. Preference will be given to adequately detailed proposals and with clear policy implications.

Submission Deadline: May 31st, 2025

Notification of Acceptance: by June 30th, 2025

Funding

There is no registration fee. Some reimbursement of travel and accommodation expenses is available for participants from academic institutions. Meals during the conference and the social dinner will be provided for all participants.

Organizing Committee

Marzia Romanelli, Martino Tasso, Pietro Tommasino, Manuele Nucci, and Marco Romani (all Banca d'Italia)
