External communication

Changes to the Governing Council meeting schedule for 2022 and to the frequency of external Governing Council meetings

On 20 September 2021 the Governing Council decided to cancel the monetary policy meeting originally planned for 20 January 2022 and the non-monetary policy meeting planned for 2 February 2022, instead scheduling a monetary policy meeting for 3 February 2022. Accordingly, the Governing Council adopted adjusted indicative calendars for the Eurosystem's regular tender operations and reserve maintenance periods in 2022 (see below).

In addition, to emphasise its commitment to a greater interaction with civil societies of the euro area as shown during the recent listening events organised in the context of the monetary policy strategy review, the Governing Council decided to organise two of its meetings per year outside Frankfurt as of 2022. As of 2023 a pattern is foreseen of one external monetary policy meeting in spring and one external non-monetary policy meeting in autumn. The venues for external meetings will be selected upon offers made by the governors of the euro area national central banks to host such meetings. The updated meeting schedule of the Governing Council is available on the ECB's website.
